Description

Provide a short description of the event and its activities.

This online event marked the end of the project “Multiperspective Holocaust Remembrance in Contemporary Europe” (short: MuRem). Throughout the project, we engaged with educators and researchers from across Europe to foster dialogue and enhance multiperspectivity and interdisciplinarity in European Holocaust Education, while acknowledging the diversity of memory cultures and their implications for the present.

With this final event, we reflected on past networking meetings focused on multiperspectivity in Holocaust education and addressed key topics previously discussed during those meetings. We also presented the project outcomes, such as the European survey and the practice toolbox “Multiperspectivity in Practice” on the MuRem website which serves as the basis for further cooperation in the field. The two-hour online event also featured a presentation by Prof. Dr. Omer Bartov, Samuel P. Hays Professor of Holocaust and Genocide Studies at Brown University about: “The Benefits and Perils of Holocaust Uniqueness: Political, Legal, Pedagogical, and Humanitarian Implications”, followed by a collective discussion on these themes with the European network partners and other participants. For a more detailed workshop report and the program, see:
